Emerging technologies bring solid-state lighting home

THEY'RE OUT OF SIGHT

Energy savings aside, LEDs' gripping allure is born from their ability to wow. Lumen Strip from the German design-technology company Evado certainly does just that, affirming LEDs' role in all their modular, chromatic glory. Though the sparkling custom mosaic installations are most at home amid the high-energy hustle and bustle of hospitality haunts—the systems are furnished with a proprietary computer infrastructure that controls each diode individually, resulting in spectacular effects that mimic such organic movements as cascading water—they represent the endless imaginative possibilities that LEDs hold for the future of lighting.
